I have owed debts to too many people. The pain many people have suffered because of me is tremendous. There is no way I can imagine how great the pain I shall face in the future would be, either. Even the rest of my life would be a burden to others. Due to my poor health I cannot do anything. Neither am I able to read books nor to write essays. Thank you. Honestly, that's it. When I meet Ryu Si-min, he doesn't like everything I do, so he sometimes says a lot of bitter things. Of course so do I, I don't? The reason I really have wanted to express my gratitude for today is that you all protected me when I was in very difficult times. As you have done, friends are friends in need and politicians who endure in need are real politicians. I really wanted to say that. Everyone! The sky helped me to talk, and it kept raining, and it stopped raining when Ryu Si-min was up! Ewwwow... You guys, shall I say something casually? Sigh... I am! Yeah. Today, I'm going to say what I want to say. Ya, feel so good! Thank you.

What have Korean army done so far! I've been to the army, and I've been trained in the reserve army, and They have been asking people to pay taxes so many times, and They have been calling me and giving me a wheel of fortune training, but what did the people on top of army do? "I'm the Secretary of Defense!" "I'm the Chief of Staff!" Are you saying that they've been so condescending? So we gathered in a row and made a statement saying that we shouldn't retrieve the pass. Aren't they derelicts of duty? Shame on you! You're doing all these disgraceful things. If we get the command right back, our Korean soldiers will do well. Korean people are good at economy, culture, movies, and they are good at everything, and They’re also good at making phones, cars, boats, and everything! Why, why can't we just take operational control?

* condescend: 거들먹거리다

Have I ever said anything about rescuing the economy? I haven’t, but of course I had to do it well! Of course I had to do it well, but I’m sorry for not reaching 7%! If I couldn’t reach 7%, I should have reached 6%··· I should have done it! I tried so hard but··· it didn’t work! ‘What can I do at this moment?’ No matter how much I had enquired anybody for advice, no one taught me! ‘Promote people to invest’ So I asked them, ‘how can I promote people to invest?’ Then they advised me to abolish the investment limit of incorporations, but after researching and studying it carefully, it has nothing to do with the total amount of investment. In spite of that there were lots and lots of matters to be inspected. I inspected them all, looked them all, and the way to promote investment was what I have done so far; reform, open door, equilibrium, social investment, social capital, and peace! Ah, one’s missing; education. Yes, something went well and something didn’t, but I have sticked to the rules. So everyone, though I couldn’t reach 6% I became the first president who handed over the ascending economy to the next in power.

① Go to the hell, Mr. Roh
② How to achieve 7% economic growth rate
③ The Korean Modest President, Mr. Roh
④ Economy Matters all
⑤ The First Rising Economy Giver

Gravitiy is one of the four basic forces present in mother nature, which is the one acting between two material points in any space. In other words, gravity is the force objects of different mass attract each other. Basically it is only a pulling force but there is a push-back force which is called anti-gravity, though it has not yet been verified. The other three basic forces are unique in that they have both tensile and repulsive force. The term universal gravitation is coined by British physicist Issac Newton, written on his book Principia Mathematica as uniformis vis gravitatis in latin. This word was brought to Asia and was translated by Japanese scholar, which is criticized today for its abstruseness and ambiguity.

Boris Johnson has long spun political gold from his magniloquent tongue, using what some linguists and observers say (A)bombastic/modest language, esoteric vocabulary, occasional crudity and episodes of bumbling bluster. He confects what appears to be his unrehearsed speech with references ranging from classical antiquity to popular British culture, and courts popularity-enchancing controversy with the occasional use of what are now considered British imperial anachronisms. “Johnson’s use of language is often a mixture of (B)expected/unexpected metaphors or turns of phrase, hyperbole, and nostalgia, very often with a particularly British twist,” said Philip Seargeant, senior lecturer in applied linguistics at the Open University. His delivery is important, too, said Seargeant, “because this compliments the mock-heroic turn of phrase with a sense of knowing bluster, which imbues a slight sense of (C)comedy/tragedy into things.”

Owls are carnivorous birds from the order Strigiformes, which includes over 200 species. They are about twenty to seventy centimeters tall as an average. For an exception, however, elf owls are no more than twenty centimeters even if they are all grown up. The legs of them are generally thick and short. Due to their fourteen neck bones, it can turn their head up to 270 degrees. Unlike other creatures, the toenails of the middle toe are comb-shaped. Most of the owls are nocturnal but some species are diurnal such as short-eared owls. Due to their bright night vision and the soft feathers the owls can fly silently and hunt their preys at night without difficulty, which contribute to their nocturnal activity and let themselves be Grim Reapers to small mammals. North Korean leader Kim Jong Un ordered the destruction of South Korean-made hotels and other tourist facilities at the North's Diamond Mountain resort, apparently because Seoul won't defy international sanctions and resume South Korean tours at the site.

(A) The report said Kim criticized North Korea's policies pushed under his late father as too dependent on the South and vowed that the North would redevelop the site on its own.

(B) Kim's comments came during a prolonged freeze in relations with Seoul and are a major setback to liberal South Korean President Moon Jae-in, who met Kim three times last year while expressing ambitions to reboot inter-Korean economic engagement.

(C) Pyongyang's official Korean Central News Agency said Wednesday that Kim had visited the resort and described its facilities as "shabby" and lacking national character.

He has now proposed policies to reduce incarceration, address race, gender and income-based disparities in the justice system, and rehabilitate released prisoners.

In the wake of the race protests that have gripped the US this year, Joe Biden said he believes that racism exists in the US and must be dealt with through broad economic and social programs to support minorities - and a pillar of his "build back" program is to create business support for minorities through a $30 billion investment fund. (①) On criminal justice, he has moved far from his much-criticized "tough-on-crime" position of the 1990s. (②) He would now create a $20billion grant program to incentivize states to invest in incarceration reduction efforts, eliminate mandatory minimum sentences, decriminalize marijuana and expunge prior cannabis convictions, and end the death penalty. (③) However, he has rejected calls to defund police, saying resources should instead be tied to maintaining standards. (④) He argues that some funding for police should be redirected to social services like mental health, and calls for a $300million investment into a community policing program. (⑤)

CCTV is a vital tool for the police and can help solve crimes - a notable example would be the James Bulger case from 1993. CCTV images meant that the two boys who committed the crime were caught and prosecuted. However, CCTV does not always have all the answers. Sometimes the images aren't clear enough to identify people; often, criminals obscure their faces to avoid being caught. Recently, some talking CCTV cameras have been installed in the UK. These react to movement, and warn criminals that their photo has been taken. In my opinion, CCTV has gone too far. As a nation, we rely on it far too much. At what point did we decide to replace police officers with technology? Many people claim to feel safer as a result of CCTV; if more police were around I'm sure they'd feel just as safe! Many schools across Britain have installed CCTV - in classrooms, toilets and changing rooms. They say it helps to prevent bullying - but surely something else could be done instead?

Until 1953 armistice Kim Ilsung attempted to unify the Korean peninsula using military force. Outer that attempt failed, he tried to repeatedly instigate communist revolution within South Korea. But following the collapse of the Soviet Union and the disintegration of the communists' governments in Eastern Europe, Pyongyang began to experience international isolaton and rapid deterioration of its economy.

As a result the North made a series of policy shifts. In 1991, North Korea made three major concessions to the West; the first was the joint entry together with South Korea into the United Nations, which North Korea had opposed for more than three decades.

(Cough) (Cough) (Cough) Excuse me.. The second was the acceptance of cross recognition of two Koreas by the world community, especially the US, Japan, Russia, and China, which South Korea and the West had advocated since 1973. The third was its mutual recognition of the South and the North Korean governments as legitimate entities by signing a North-South agreement in December, 1991.

So this series of concessions advocated by the moderates, Kim Ilsung expected a 'quid pro quo' in the form of diplomatic and economic cooperation from the West. He also anticipated the cancellation of the annual Team Spirit exercise, but such expectations have not been fulfilled.

Consequently the hardliners gained the upper hand and the result was the North Korean declaration of its intention to pull out of the of the NPT and a series of very very belligerent statements. The hardliners think, 'if we are given no way out but to be ruined, we must we might as well go down fighting to the end.’

(A)

At that tickling moment, I held Kim Dae-jung's autobiography and showed them off the cover of it engraved with his handwritten signature. "I'ma gonna geddit dude!" then the attention was drawn to that "encyclopedia of mysterious creatures". So I threw the book 518 meters high through the air, and they just chased it to hold it with tears on their reddish eyes. Running 523 meters straightforward, I found an exit gate so I was relieved and said to my nephew "There are so few Daejung here. No matter what I say, Moo-seun-sang-gwan?" As soon as the sentence was finished he suddenly went towards the shutter switch real fast and then lowered the shutter of the gate, pressing the emergency button simultaneously.

(B)

Yes, that's right. My nephew has lived in Guanzhou so long and it made him a skate fish. My nephew, having dropped the shutter, said to me "My nigga, how could'ya say that bullshit? I'ma gonna democratize you for the first time in ma life, bitch!" Then what I could see was a big frozen fish that he was hiding in his arm. Thereafter, with the siren surrounding my ear I fainted.

(C)

Yesterday, I paid a visit to my nephew in Guanzhou, the capital of People's Republic of Jeolla, to celebrate Children's day. With my nephew I went to a store to buy him a toy and when I pointed to the toy he wanted, what I said was "Oh, you want that ttank?" Suddenly, at that very moment, there was a siren ringing and an emergency broadcast and people around us were armed with frozen skate fish and AK-47, with their faces hidden in hoods, shouting "Wutt dude? Jeon ttank? Com'here men, reactionary bitch's here! I'ma gonna find that nigga very quick, y'a know?" And they acted busy. When I was holding my breath with my nephew, I heard Chun Doo-hwan's "Soldiers, at ease" alarm I had set up, then people surrounded us and said "See, these guys'a pro-Jap reactionary, men! Lets whack em'!"
